

ON MOVING DAY

If you have pets or children, it may be advisable to have someone look after them until you're ready for them in your new home.

Put essential items on one side and keep with you, if possible, so that you can unpack them quickly at the other end. Include your kettle, mugs, tea, coffee and milk – removal men get very thirsty!

Also take your jewellery and any other valuables with you so that they don't get mislaid. It's a good idea to take your plants too as they can get damaged in a removal van.

Read the utility meters and make a note of the readings before leaving your old property.

Leave the keys and some useful information ready for your purchasers.

Cancel milk and newspaper deliveries.

If possible, give the removal company a floor plan so that they can place your furniture where you want it.

It's always a nice gesture to give the removal men a tip so have some cash available, but only if they've done the job to your satisfaction.

Ensure you have clean bed linen to hand so that you can make your bed up well before you're exhausted and are ready to climb into it!

After a good night's sleep, you can set about unpacking the rest of your belongings and enjoy getting to know your new home. Don't leave it too long to unpack just in case you need to make a claim for breakages or damage. The sooner you can inform the removal company, the better.
